Bible Studies with Emanuel White, Sr.

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven:

A time to be born,
and a time to die;
a time to plant,
and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

Ecclesiastes 3: 1-2

Specific Persons, Fear, and Harassment

- Stalking is typically directed at a specific person the victim. However, stalkers often contact the victim's family, friends and/or coworkers as part of their pattern of behavior.
- Anyone can be a victim of stalking. A majority of stalking victims are stalked by someone they know: a current or former intimate partner, acquaintance, or family member.
- The majority of stalking victims are female. However, people of all genders can be stalked. It is estimated that 1 in 3 women and 1 in 6 men will experience stalking in their lifetime.
- Many stalkers' behaviors seem innocuous or even desirable to outsiders for example, sending expensive gifts. The stalker's actions don't seem scary and are hard to explain.
- Fear is contextual. What's scary to one person may not be scary to another. In stalking cases, many of the behaviors are only scary to a victim because of their relationship with the stalker.
- Stalking and harassment are similar and can overlap. Harassment may be part of a stalking pattern of behavior/course of conduct.
- Generally, the element of fear is what separates stalking from harassment. Harassment is typically irritating and bothersome, sometimes to the point where a victim feels deeply uncomfortable. However, victims of harassment are not typically afraid of their perpetrators.
