MORE ACTIONS TOWARD BETTER HEALTH

Maintain a Healthy Weight -

Being overweight is hard on your heart. It increases your risk of having heart disease, stroke, high cholesterol, high blood pressure, and diabetes. Choosing heart-healthy foods and getting regular exercise will help you achieve and maintain a healthy weight. Also, find ways to reduce stress, which affects energy and hunger and, if chronic, can make your body store more fat.

If your doctor diagnosed you with overweight or obesity, it's important to follow their recommendations for losing weight. Health professionals recommend losing 5% to 10% of your initial weight over the course of about 6 months. But a loss of just 3% to 5% of your current weight can lower triglycerides and glucose levels in your blood, as well as your risk of developing type 2 diabetes. Losing more than 3% to 5% of your weight American Heart Month can improve blood pressure readings, lower "bad" LDL cholesterol, & increase "good" HDL cholesterol.

Quit Smoking -

The chemicals in tobacco smoke harm your heart & blood vessels in many ways. Talk to your doctor if you vape. There is scientific evidence that flavorings found in vaping products can damage your heart/lungs.

- Ask your family and friends for support in your effort.
- Set a guit date and let those close to you know about it.
- To keep your hands busy and be with others when you get urges to smoke, consider joining a group that focuses on sewing, knitting, woodworking, or other such activities.
- If you have trouble quitting smoking on your own, consider joining a support group. Many hospitals, workplaces, and community groups offer classes to help people quit smoking.
