Announcements

A large, powerful waterfall cascades down a series of dark, moss-covered rocks. The water is white and frothy as it falls, creating a misty spray at the base. The surrounding forest is dense with green foliage, and the rocks are heavily covered in vibrant green moss. The overall scene is serene and majestic.

Ministry

If cancer forms in a polyp, it can grow into the wall of the colon or rectum over time. The wall of the colon and rectum is made up of many layers. Colorectal cancer starts in the innermost layer (the mucosa) and can grow outward through some or all of the other layers (see picture).

When cancer cells are in the wall, they can then grow into blood vessels or lymph vessels (tiny channels that carry away waste and fluid). From there, they can travel to nearby lymph nodes or to distant parts of the body.

The stage (extent of spread) of colorectal cancer depends on how deeply it grows into the wall and if it has spread outside the
